I am currently in the first bootstrapping phase of my game (just launching test binaries and collecting bug reports), and I just installed Ubuntu 12.04 LTS 32-bit in VirtualBox. I used the default partitioning to create a single partition of 100MB for system and boot and another 100MB for root. I am having some issues with my game freezing upon shutdown, which I'm attributing to the ASLR (address space layout randomization). How do I enable this feature? Do I have to build the kernel myself, or do I have to install another bootloader? I did find an article that stated I could get away with just setting "ASLR Off" in the GRUB bootloader, but I still do not understand
