Symbol Codes are among the most widely used barcodes, that can be used to uniquely identify products. They are automatically readable, and their detailed information can be used to accurately identify a product. Symbol codes contain a readable information area and an area for an unique ID. Adobe Illustrator CC Using Adobe Illustrator to create barcodes may look a bit complex to a newbie. But it's not difficult at all if you follow the instructions and watch how everything works. This package has two different tools, a rectangle and a symbol. Rectangle The rectangle is used for creating text barcodes. The symbols are used for creating numeric barcodes. It works very well for creating different text and numeric codes. Creating barcodes from images is a breeze with BarcodeGen. The application creates codes from any type of graphic, using its own database. To use this feature, you need to add a graphic, to the database, and it can be done in less than ten seconds. All you need to do is to click on the Add button, and then pick a suitable image file. This will be converted to a code and added to the database. After you have created a code, you are ready to print it. This is a great feature that lets you print from the same database, as the code you have generated is ready to use. This also saves time because the same codes can be printed later. Features BarcodeGen has a user-friendly interface, which is both functional and easy to use. It includes all the necessary tools, both for creating and using barcodes. Its color images are easy to read, and you can change the font and color. The code generator lets you create codes of different sizes. You can customize all of the codes, including the font, number of digits, and more. You can even create several codes, one for each product. The code generator lets you also export codes, which will be saved as bitmap files. You can add a picture, as well as text, to the code. You can even use it as a web server, by adding a URL to the picture, and making it your home page. If you need more than a web link, you can also add a QR code. Dedicated settings let you configure the printing of the codes, as well as changing the colors, font, and more. Using a color scanner is simple with Barcode Scanner. All you need to do is take a picture, which will then be converted to a barcode and added to the database. The picture will be saved in the current directory as a.bmp file. If you want to display the codes, you can easily do so. The codes are read automatically, and the app will automatically select the best font to use, according to the size and type of the code. You can even create new fonts, and create codes
