This is a professional data recovery software that will come in handy in case you lose files, lose data due to virus attack or corruption and so on. It's worth mentioning that you can recover files on a selected local drive or a disk image file. How it works The tool works pretty much like a typical data recovery software, where you can select which files you want to recover and set a deadline, or you can even pick the latest date when your files should be recovered. What's more, you are also allowed to select specific data types, such as documents, audio files, video files, etc. The scan procedure itself takes place automatically, and the tool will be in your disposal for the specified time. However, if you don't finish your work before the deadline, you will be asked to finish it later, which doesn't sound so great. When it comes to performance, the utility is equipped with a 30 days money-back guarantee, and no special requirements are needed to recover your lost files. User interface Data Recover offers a streamlined interface, which doesn't hide any of its functions. The main window is divided into five sections, and you can choose between custom and quick scan options. General settings In the General tab you can specify what you want to achieve by running the recovery process. You can choose how long the recovery process should take place and select a specific drive and folder, if the latter is already in use. Additionally, you can select the format of your files, and even exclude specific data types, like photos or videos, etc. The Advanced Settings option is also available, and you are allowed to choose a number of advanced options that are necessary to recover your lost files. These include the parallel scanning, the number of parallel processes, scan speed and a custom filter that will be applied to the results. Scan The Scan tab is dedicated to specifying the files you want to recover, which makes the data recovery process easier.
