And there's no better gift for a woman than a man who loves her the way a father should. But like everything else, it takes two. As a husband and father, I've lived many roles, depending on the situation. Sometimes I'm the helper, sometimes the boss, and sometimes I'm the one who asks for help. But I've never been the one who needed to ask. So even though I have happily married and raised three beautiful and amazing children, my heart is always with the children I can't have. The ones who have a father who would do anything for them, who loves them unconditionally and who will never stop fighting for them. My wife and children are beautiful gifts, but I can't be as good a father as the guy who went to prison for them. This is a story that has been shared by every single father who has been "it's all good" when "it isn't." Every single man who has allowed a woman to destroy them, who hasn't fought, who hasn't stood his ground. Every single man who let his family down. Please be the man your children deserve.
