2005 Canadian federal election The 41st Canadian federal election was held on December 7, 2005. The incumbent Conservative Party of Canada government led by Prime Minister Stephen Harper was re-elected to a second term in office, defeating the Liberal Party of Canada and the New Democratic Party led by Michael Ignatieff. The Conservatives won in every region of the country, with the exception of Quebec and Atlantic Canada. The Liberals were hoping for a breakthrough in Quebec, but that province's close result, along with the defeat of the New Democrats in Atlantic Canada, doomed the Liberal campaign to defeat. Harper became the first Canadian Prime Minister since John A. Macdonald in 1878 to be re-elected with his party in government. He won a majority of 5 seats, with the addition of 7.5%, the largest majority in Canadian history. The Conservatives won a total of 281 seats, compared to the 186 won by the Liberals, and the 39 won by the New Democrats. The Conservative plurality was a record in the history of the party. The Harper government was sworn into office on January 20, 2006. The Green Party of Canada and the Bloc Québécois each won one seat in this election. The Bloc Québécois leader Mario Beaulieu became the first member of the Bloc Québécois to hold office in Quebec since the party's formation in 1981. What's New in the Adobe Photoshop 2021 (Version 22.4.1)?

On the one hand, the hit "Silent Alarm" was the first single from the album and was Billboard's #1 rock song of 1968, and (helped by Bon Jovi) was a hit on the modern rock charts in the U.S. and a No. 1 hit in Canada. On the other hand, the album itself barely charted and was a No. 18 Top 20 album. It probably could have finished a couple of slots higher but like its previous album it failed miserably at the music video front, with the exception of the rather successful "Silent Alarm," which was also a television commercial. Without a doubt, "Number One With a Heart" remains one of their biggest hits, especially in the U.K. It also was an "American Top 20" hit. As with "Silent Alarm," the song is a staple on classic rock radio playlists. Meanwhile, the song "Never My Love" has entered the Canadian national charts and is now starting to pick up traction. And somewhat surprisingly, "Sweet Jewel of Love" climbed into the Canadian charts at the same time "Number One With A Heart" was reaching its zenith. Both "B-Boys" and "Blood on the Risers" are also fairly strong hits. The Canadian single of "Sweet Jewel of Love," a cover of the Bobby Goldsboro song, hit #51 in the Canadian Top 40. Aerobic exercise training for people with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease: a systematic review. We conducted a systematic review to determine the effects of exercise training on patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. We searched four electronic databases to identify controlled trials of exercise training in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Three reviewers independently assessed studies for eligibility and methodological quality. Nine studies were included. Six trials with 100 participants compared exercise training with usual care.
