Background ===== Alzheimer's Disease (AD) is the most common cause of dementia in the elderly. ApoE4, the most significant genetic risk factor for AD has been associated with increased risk of amyloid deposition, higher A β 42/A β 40 ratio and higher odds ratio for progression of cognitive deficits \[[@B1]-[@B5]\]. AD brain is characterized by abnormal iron deposits which are highly concentrated in perivascular spaces. We hypothesize that iron deposition is different in AD patients with different ApoE genotypes, resulting in different deposition patterns. Materials and methods ===== Synchrotron radiation ((111)In-Df-Bev) was used for measuring the biodistribution and SPECT/CT imaging of Abeta42 and amyloid (SPECT) in brains of ApoE+/+, ApoE4+/+, and ApoE4-/- mice, after a single injection of 30 pmol of Abeta42 or ¹¹¹In-Df-Bev. Plasma distribution of the drugs and brain uptake were analyzed by gamma counter and SPECT imaging, respectively. Results ===== SPECT imaging showed a significant reduction of (111)In-Df-Bev uptake in ApoE4+/+, compared to ApoE4-/- mice in amyloid-rich areas. A significantly higher uptake of (
