-1. Which of these images has been manipulated in Photoshop? a. Photo 1 b. Photo 3 c. Photo 2 d. Photo 4 #. **. What is the difference between raster and vector tools? ** ## What Is a Vector Image? A vector image is a digital graphic that has no pixels.

It's very different from a raster image, which contains pixels. Though raster images appear as black or white lines, they are actually made up of individual dots, or pixels. A vector image can be laid out on a page without worrying about resolution as it will scale very well, and the graphics can be moved or zoomed without a change in quality. Vector images can even be edited with the same tools used for drawing them. Ease of editing makes them the preferred choice for display and web use, but do not be fooled into thinking that they are always the best choice. In an edit where accuracy is of the utmost importance, raster is usually the better choice. ## Use a Vector Clip Art Collection As well as vector images being more versatile and easily edited, they can also be incorporated into other items such as print designs. Don't be put off creating quality images with a large variety of clip art and clip art collections. Adobe offers numerous collections, and these can help you to create high quality clip art. Adobe stock has vast clip art resources such as line drawings, photos, 3D and vectors, with numerous collections to choose from.

One of the more difficult things about getting involved with atheism is the lack of a sense of community. People come into it, they get involved and they leave. There's no pattern that I can discern as to how people come in and out of atheism, and with community, it's much the same. I often think people come to atheism, as they might to a religion. They figure since they don't believe in a god, they'll feel better if they join a religion. And since I don't believe in a god, I'll follow along. It's a mistake on a number of levels, but it's not the worst problem we atheists have. For one thing, it's the wrong religion. We're not like all the other religions. None of them tell you where you're going wrong. Atheism is like no other religion, and that's a good thing. And it's also a mistake to think a given person is a "true believer" or "true atheist". It's easy to assume so, but you'll find most atheists don't do that. They're in it for themselves, they just don't think it's the best answer. They'll try any religion, in fact, even some Christian ones. But most will say they don't believe in God. After all, isn't believing in God the worst possible thing for you to believe in? It might seem reasonable, but it's not true. If you accept that God exists, you get to decide what kind of God you think exists. It's up to you. You can make your beliefs about what God would be like reasonable or unreasonable, you can ask yourself questions about what God would do. By thinking about what God is, you get a lot of benefits. You'll be able to do things like figure out when you'll die, whether the universe is eternal, whether there's anyone else in it, how you should treat your fellow human beings, and so on. And, if you want to, you can even be a skeptic, you can investigate what you think God is. You might choose to believe certain things about God; others might choose to believe
