What's new:

is not the same as “wish fulfilment.” The fantasy I am describing, is the one that we have already visualized, that we imagine and that is always “on the verge” of reality and objective fulfillment. What I am talking about is a mental model that can be experienced without “wish fulfilment.” Belief takes this fantasy to the next level and transforms it into real. It gives it reason and reason is non-existent (in essence) because humans are not actually observing the world, but rather are living inside their imagination. The real world does not exist in a concept sense, it only exists based on our perception of it (i.e. the world exists with certain attributes or attributes don't exist). For example: I cannot physically, in my mind see the meaning of words, e.g. the word “Color”; however, a person without color vision can think, in his mind, that color is an abstract or a concept that exists without actually observing the light bouncing off of objects. Therefore, reality or real (observable) existence is merely subjective (not universal). So far we have been talking about fantasy or imaginative possibility... Now let's talk about what we are able to do with the world based on how we read or react to it. A person can clearly eat and drink food but if they believe this is an impossibility, then they can't eat that food. However, fantasy is different; fantasy is what we are aware of, while reality is our imagination imagining what we want it to be. This is our point of view that influences our reality. If I believe that I am not a good trader, that means I won't trade. Since I believe this and believe that I am not trading well, this is my fantasy. This is what I wish for my reality. What I am aware of is the simplicity of my ability to trade and how uncomfortable it is to be a trader. Even when your dream becomes reality for a limited period of time, you are still a trader, you are still subject to the elements, weather, trends, speed and movement of markets, etc. “I have a message from Jesus on the cover of The Waste Land. My God wants things to be very clear. Maybe He's not only preaching to the choir anymore...” “No, I am not going to give up my life. I
