First, a quick question: Did you change your password after reinstalling Windows? If you did, then you probably shouldn't worry. The new password would be the same, and it's unlikely that you can reuse the old one. But what if you didn't change your password and now you can't get in? Turns out, there are ways to reset the BIOS password. Sometimes this allows you to change your password after the fact, or even to uninstall all of your security software and re-install it. The new password would be the same, and it's unlikely that you can reuse the old one. But what if you didn't change your password and now you can't get in? Turns out, there are ways to reset the BIOS password. Sometimes this allows you to change your password after the fact, or even to uninstall all of your security software and re-install it. Here's how to reset it: 1. Open an elevated command prompt. Click the Start button, type cmd in the search box, and then right-click the cmd.exe program. Select Run as Administrator. 2. In the command prompt, type this: `bcdedit /set "{bootmgr}" path \Device\HarddiskVolume2\windows\pist\pist.wim` This will replace the file found in the `\Device\HarddiskVolume2\windows\pist\pist.wim` folder on the hard drive with one that's on the CD/DVD drive. 3. Close the command prompt. 4. Restart the PC. 5. If you see the BIOS screen, then you know you were successful. Source & Copyright: Tools for Microsoft Press. Cytokine modulation during suppression of HIV replication by HIV-specific CD8+ and CD4+ T cell-mediated immunity. To further investigate the role of CD4+ and CD8+ T cells in controlling HIV replication in vivo, a patient was studied who was receiving antiretroviral therapy. We monitored both total and subsets of lymphocytes and circulating cytokines during a transient increase in CD8+ T cell-mediated immunity. HIV-specific CD8+ T cell activity correlated with an increase in interleukin-4 (IL-4) production by CD8+ cells, and with an increase in interferon (IFN)-gamma by CD4+ T cells. Although these increases in production of IL-4 and IFN-gamma by CD4+ and CD8+ cells, respectively, were transient, they lasted for many weeks after the boost of antiviral CD8+ T cells. We observed suppression of HIV replication for at least 45 days after the boost of antiviral immunity. During this period, increases in IL-4 and IFN-gamma production by CD8+ cells were associated with delayed HIV replication and increased levels of IFN-gamma in the p24 antigen assay. Our results showed that rapid control of HIV replication was associated with suppression of both HIV-specific CD4+ T and CD8+ T cells. These data are consistent with a requirement for both CD4+ and CD8+ T cells for the establishment of immune control. In an earlier column I argued that Gething and the Bay Street boys – people like Sylvia Sutherland and John Whitney – should be rounded up and removed from the government. “Not every problem can be solved with a regulation or with an edict,” I wrote. “Let’s face it. When a problem starts to get out of hand, you have to hit it. Gently. Patiently. Accurately. And sometimes when the hammer’s down, you have to whack it.”The aversive effect of stress on the expectancy of punishment in the operant schedule-shift paradigm.
