It's also more portable and less expensive, so it's the perfect rangefinder camera for the film/digital/lens shooter on a limited budget. The K2 is a beautiful compact camera with a new, bold design and an array of intelligent and flexible options for photographers. Its unique folding lens mount makes it ideal for photographers of every style and skill level. Its basic, compact design makes it ideal for travel and includes a battery grip, thumb wheel, built-in flash and viewfinder. A DNG file import function allows you to import RAW files from the camera, and the 7.6MP photos are sharp and brilliant, due to its 21.1MP sensor. The new K2 will be available in Spring 2013.Rice University's Medical Center Research Institute's Urban Studies Program is developing a program of research and education for racial minorities, the poor, underrepresented students, veterans, and others who face obstacles in accessing health care. Called the Career Development Initiative, the multifaceted program centers on ways to enroll college students in health care careers — from medical technicians to physicians — and provide them with professional development opportunities that will increase their chances of getting a job. The program is being called “Project Reach,” and it is being launched as part of University Hospitals and MetroHealth's affiliation. The program is a collaboration between Rice, University Hospitals and MetroHealth. The UH partners are Rice's CTSA, College of Natural Sciences and Math, Department of Medical Physics and Bioengineering, Department of Pathology and Immunology and the Henry M. Robert Institute for Chemistry and Chemical Biology. MetroHealth is the university's primary health care network. It is designed to help fill a gap in the supply of health care workers, resulting from a dearth of minority, low-income and first-generation students who choose to major in physical and biological science disciplines
