Contact.. MasterKeys for Microsoft Office. Office 365. Add-ons. An electronic apparatus such as a computer is formed by assembling various components such as a display device, a motherboard, a memory device, and a connector into a case, and the assembly of the components into the case is repeated in accordance with the user's option. When the components are assembled into the case, a large number of components are arranged in the case, and many of the components are provided at low density to make a large footprint area of the apparatus. Accordingly, when an apparatus including such a large number of components is assembled, an assembling time becomes longer and an assembling cost becomes high. As another example of such an apparatus, an electronic apparatus such as a notebook computer includes a display device, a keyboard unit, a main memory device, a storage device (such as a hard disk), and a connector, and an assembling time becomes longer and an assembling cost becomes high because the assembling time becomes longer due to the need of using large number of components and assembling components into the case.

Q: Checking if a string contains substring within another string and returning the index of the first instance of the substring

The following is the problem that I am facing currently: Given 2 strings s and T, check if T is contained in s. T should be contained within s, not necessarily a substring, but within s. return the index of the first occurrence of T within s. Examples: s = "foo"; T = "xyz" => 1 (Because "xyz" appears within "foo") s = "foo"; T = "foo" => 0 (Because "foo" does not appear within "foo") s = "foo"; T = "bar" => 0 (Because "bar" does not appear within "foo") s = "foo"; T = "ghi" => 0 (Because "ghi" does not appear within "foo") s = "foo"; T =
