has been spent visiting friends and family and exploring the fjords of Ålesund, Norway. It was very unexpected as last week I had only expected to spend most of the time indoors, being a workaholic and spending much of the time reading for a Cambridge ESOL exam next weekend.
Instead, it has been in the Finnish woods, the Norwegian fjords, the mountains of Norway and the fjords of Norway. I shall be travelling into the Finnish region of Kainuu (I think) in July to spend time with friends, and to practice my driving there. Soon I will be heading for remote Lanzarote in the Canaries, followed by a trip to the River Cevenne in Brittany in October, then a trip to the Alps to explore ski slopes and snow fields. Q: How to determine if the given integral converges or diverges? Let $a > 0$ and $f(x) = \frac{1}{x^a}$, $x \in (0, 1)$. The question is to determine whether the given integral converges or diverges. Now, we know that f is continuous and positive on $[0, 1]$. So, g is also positive on $[0, 1]$ and also $g(x) = 1/f(x)$ is positive on $[0, 1]$. Consider $F(x) = \int_0^x f(t) dt$. Now, if we define F at $x=0$ as $F(0) = \int_0^0 f(t) dt$, then from the definition of Riemann Integral we see that $F(0) = 0$. If we define F at $x=1$ as $F(1) = \int_0^1 f(t) dt$ then we can see that $F(1) \setminus$
