BOSS BATTLE Black Box Graveyard An exciting team-based action RPG for up to four players! PC GAMER Game: Check out the Steam page for more information.Available on Steam: In 1946 it seemed that the Allies were on top, but the tide turned, and Germany's unrelenting aggression, combined with a tactical advantage of surprise, was the deciding factor. It is our aim to recreate that scenario in a smaller scale. As opposed to WWII scenarios, this game will be a very short event (1-2 hours) and will be played in a scenario similar to those described in "Disaster - The Long War - Desperate Resistance" by Robert Ellis. If you don't already know: - Glider games focus on coordination, cooperation and teamwork - Coordination and cooperation are key to victory and survival in disasters and emergencies - Teams of 4 can take part in this event and enjoy the game together at the same time - Many of the games will be held indoors, with a touch of artificial intelligence and a huge amount of electronic motion-detection and closed-circuit TV - These events are really fun, many people come just to play and relax - We use the old 1944-like maps (we have one from the late 1970s and another new one, still in progress). This is a camera mount for your iPhone 6 or 6s. Designed to be used with a longer 1250mm or 2050mm camera, it also works great with shorter lenses on the same side. R The Tiger Striker MP016R is a single-shot revolver rifled for both double-action and single-action cartridges. The rifling is 12 grooves by 6, aiming at the.44 Centerfire cartridges, with a barrel length of 16 inches. The MP016R has an internal locking system, and a safety. The MP016R can be chambered in.22 LR. History The Tiger Striker MP016R was created by Remington Arms Company in 1982, under the supervision of Arthur Tromp and his team. They aimed to create a small pistol caliber weapon using a rifled barrel and a rotating cylinder chamber. With modest resources, they developed a new chambering by using a single-action Colt 1911 firing mechanism. The military was receptive to the idea, and Glock and the Swiss firm Ammuntor acquired the resulting prototype. Nonetheless, the Ruger P85S was preferred over the Tiger Striker when the Swiss government ordered the ammunition, although the Tiger Striker was still in development and its design was not ready for production. Several reasons were cited for this choice including the claim that Ruger was owned at that time by Henry Ruger Jr., son of firearms designer Daniel W. Ruger, and it was believed that a subsequent Ruger factory ordered revision of the P85S design would come first, at a time when the factory was fully stocked in production tools and spare parts, which delayed the delivery of the Tiger Striker design. Finally, the swiss government chose the P85S, apparently concluding that the Ruger pistol would not be affected by the significant differences in caliber. The fully developed Tiger Striker MP016R was put to use in the Swiss Civil Protection Service (SPC), mainly serving as a backup.22 LRS self-loading shoulder rifle. Switzerland has a high use of this calibre for range shooting, and it is the chief arm carried by every ASPO-Vet official, comparing to the Ruger Stryker in the ranks of the SPC. Since 2004, the Tiger Striker MP016R has been the only.22 LR pistol made in Switzerland under the official name of Handlee II. The movement stills comes from a Colt, from 1903, and the frame was made by the Swiss as a one-off revolver of them. Design The MP016R is a lightweight, comfortable, accurate, compact and single-action revolver with a drop-safe which features

The Orbital Bullet is a timeless Action/RPG game in which you must explore a chaotic universe to survive. Beyond the hostile environment, you'll also need to deal with the equally hostile inhabitants of The Bullet, for without the former you might as well throw in the towel! Strap yourself in and prepare for "Hero Mode"! Is Orbital Bullet worth it? Definitely, since I haven't played a new action roguelite that I found this delightful in quite some time. After first hearing about Orbital Bullet I was concerned that it may be a gimmick. While this game certainly has a gimmick to it, it does well with its pacing and variety in order to make it feel like one of the best roguelites I've played. Orbital Bullet has a strong sense of atmosphere that is reminiscent of a favourite of mine, Rogue Legacy. Updating Rogue Legacy, this is your new home, and it's up to you to create your own; upgrade your ships, explore, encounter enemies and build your own personal arsenal of weapons in order to find your way out. Gameplay The primary way that Orbital Bullet differs from other action/RPGs is in its roguelite format. This means that you have a start location and your progression will determine what you end up with based on actions you take. You'll do whatever it takes to get off The Bullet, and there are a plethora of different abilities to help you along your way. They range from the mundane to the awesome, with plenty of possible combinations between the two. When you log in you'll have access to the base that you've built, right down to your own menus. You have a whole host of characters, each with their own abilities, skills, weapons and ships; you can build as many as you like. Once you've decided which ships you want to fill out your loadout, you'll have to find them in the wild. A small world of procedurally generated areas means that you'll never see the same area twice, and that's good because the areas are large enough to be interesting without the game forcing you to repeat the same area over and over. This variety is good, but can cause some problems since the game will randomly assign new areas to you. While it's not a huge problem, it can throw you for a loop since it's hard to be prepared for
