 Negotiating Team Alien Hostage Negotiating Team (AHNT) was a United States Department of State interagency, civilian hostage rescue unit, whose mission was to rescue American government personnel from abductions by extraterrestrials. The group was created in secret in 1983 and disbanded in July 2005. Though covert, its activities were known to Congress, the press, and its operatives, even though its members were sworn to secrecy. The mission of the group was to investigate "true" UFO incursions and abductions, not merely claims of abduction. Mission The mission of the Alien Hostage Negotiating Team was to locate and bring home the abducted American government personnel. The team worked closely with the United States Department of Defense, FBI, Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) and other government agencies. Its members were highly trained (Secret Service and Army Airborne specially qualified) and held top-secret security clearances. They worked in clandestine, classified operations. The team's work was covert and directly related to Alien encounters. The Alien Hostage Negotiating Team was authorized to negotiate with abductors for the return of abducted American government personnel. The Alien Hostage Negotiating Team's activities were sometimes supervised by the President's Foreign Intelligence Advisory Board. Before its creation in 1983, intelligence agencies had no effective inter-agency liaison for working on UFO investigations. No agency could independently perform its own investigation of an unresolved UFO incident. The team set up links among the U.S. government agencies known for working on UFO information and set up procedures and mechanisms for sharing information in real time. The final step of AHNT's mission was to brief the President, the White House and the Congress on all major, urgent or controversial sightings, whether past, present or future, as well as on all alien ships, physical bodies, and biological samples. In the case of a major report, the team indicated the source of the reports, and recommended countermeasures to protect the U.S. against alien species and technologies. Reports and Operations Based in the Defense Department's Aviation International Research Center (AVIRC) outside of Washington, DC, the team was activated in 1982 to investigate UFO abduction cases and to retrieve the eighteen missing Americans who had reported being abducted. It began its search in Operation BLUEBIRD in May 1985 and became fully operational in March 1986. Its greatest successes were the rescue of the seven navy pilots in Operation LANDING BEACH in April 1986,
