A micro-experience, a meditation, an infinite puzzle! Approach an infinite number of objects through a very small, very black space and feel a unique emotional experience. You will perform an infinite number of gestures in a black space that will remain the same, not so very far from us. Only a few will have an equivalent at the time. Unium will find its own! Aaarrggghhhh. Thanks for the great reviews! They really motivated me to make some updates to the game and make it even more entertaining. Lots of great new stuff is coming! Also, I'm nearly done with the new version of the game, which I'll upload to the Play Store very soon. Before that, I'd like to let you know that I launched a new version of the game: the version 2.0. In this version, I've made some essential changes:* fixed more bugs* added some new graphics* added some user input more efficiently (without losing the title of easiest game on IOS) Sorry for the delay, I've been busy with my final exams until last week. I'm happy to tell you that I'm almost done with them and now I'm off to the land of Unium + Tech + PR! Been a while! Sorry! But I have finally finished the University. It was my third year and I passed with enough points to get a grade. I had my doubts but I passed! Anyhow, I've been working on the game for a month or so and finally uploaded Unium to Google Play! Unium is now available on Google Play Store! It's the first puzzle game I've made and I'm really proud of it. I wanted to make a very similar game but infinitely simpler. Let me know what you think of it! I added a new chapter for you to challenge your intelligence and puzzle prowess. There are less items and difficult to find, but I hope you'll have fun with it. I think I've uploaded the last version for now. This time I've got way more points than the previous version and I'll probably release a new version in 2 months, which will contain all the new stuff I added in the last few weeks. I've got a couple of updates for you. The first is that the game is now available for the Google Play Store! The last version was available on IOS but not on the

You need to solve Sammy's puzzle.

To do it you will be facing a Bull. In every level you can use two kinds of items.

1. Time - fix the clock just before the bull arrives. Once in a level has been fixed, you have 15 seconds to finish the level and get into the next one. You have a limited number of pieces to collect. Once you collect those pieces the clock will be free for you to fix it again.
2. Event - changing colors, patterns, pictures, pictures and sounds in different levels.

Q: PostgreSQL character data conversion on BigQuery I have been trying to format a lot of data for BigQuery using the following PHP code:

$data = array( "ABCDEFGHJIJ" => "0101", "QWERTYUIOP" => "0201", );
$data_format = json_encode($data);

The issue is that I also need to preserve single quotes (and double quotes) at the same time. The character data is sometimes being directly inserted into the database and sometimes being passed through an API so I don't have the luxury of a PHP formatter. Can anyone recommend an approach I can take to convert the text to a format that BigQuery can accept? Is there a way for a wildcard to be able to escape the escaped character? A: With the current list of supported escaping methods, you should be able to use a single function with double-escaping logic.

CREATE TEMP FUNCTION json_double_quote(chr STRING) AS ( SELECT JSON_OBJECT('chr', chr) :: JSON FROM (VALUES ('\\"') :: chr) V(chr); ); SELECT ARRAY(SELECT json_double_quote(UPLO.value) FROM UNNEST( SELECT value FROM UNNEST( SELECT to_string(CHARS.value, ".||CHARS.n) AS value FROM UNNEST( SELECT value FROM UNNEST(['A', 'a']:: c9d1549cdd

What's new:

By Roger Bazinet Jump Rabbit Turtle is about a young native woman, a Houston housewife, who is reluctant to have an affair with a rich businessman, but at the same time, can't seem to get that "rabbit under her roof!" The story is about how this woman gets to know the man, and how she ultimately goes through with it never really knowing who he is at all. This story was originally published in The New Yorker magazine.  Every so often, Mrs. S pushed her car to the parking lot in front of the Houston Hilton, where her car repairs were being done. She parked, dashed in, found the garage and parked again, to see if the business room was full or empty, and finally dashed back to the car and into the hotel keeping room. There she would spend an hour or so, on the weekends, visiting with friends and acquaintances and maybe even going out to lunch. But it was all very casual, almost laid-back. She usually appeared too casual to others, more like the hotel clerk than the wives of the men who came for repairs, who had to actually peel herself off the office chair and go to work. There were six other women or wives of men in her window-repair business. She was one of only six women working, the others being three secretaries and a bookkeeper with the Hotel. One of the secretaries was male, the bookkeeper was young, French, and male, the third secretary was male, and the other two might as well have been. Mrs. S knew all that. Mrs. S had probably been in that window-repair business less than a year. It had all been a coincidence. Growing up, she had been more of a tennis player than a weekend window-washer, and she'd had a tennis coach who was a lawyer. When she graduated from high school, she had chosen not to go to college, but to be a model instead. She chose the Grand Hyatt Hotel on the Boulevard to model in, one that was placed in the newspaper on a Sunday morning and which was deserted, and that was closed on weekends and Monday. After about a year, she got tired of that, and she went down to the hotel

Mad Dog Studios is a small indie game development studio. With a core of four coders and a couple of artists, we are constantly working on new projects. You can follow us on Twitter and visit our site at maddog.studios. In 2016 we'll have been around for three years, bringing us to the wonderful occasion of being finally able to present to you our first game, Hammerwatch. The idea came to us when we were thinking about a funny way of developing our own project. Our four developers gave their own ideas on it, and we started prototyping in the beginning of that year. This is what we have developed: A hack and slash adventure/action game in a pixelart world. The protagonist of the game, Hammerwatch, is a man who has lost his son, and intends to do whatever he can to find him again. His son, Hammerwatch Junior, was kidnapped by the Eggmother. After an intense battle with the Eggmother, Hammerwatch, his son and their best friends (the skeletons of the village of Lull), find themselves inside the Eggmother's lair. The Eggmother, an alien, creates objects to help her control the Earth. The first creature she creates is the dog who attacks Hammerwatch and his companions. With the help of Hammerwatch Junior, he escapes and gets revenge against his brother. During the game, he will continue to battle other dogs and other enemies, who he has to defeat in order to get to the Eggmother. This is only the beginning, as the levels will evolve with the protagonist and the enemies. Perfekt, it took quite a while until I play a game, but here I am with Hystoria, the most beloved game of 2009. Its sequel Hystoria 2: The Final Revolution came out in 2011. But wait, it hasn't even been 20 years since it's debut. The three ark settlers are now on the way back home after a long time in space.

They will get trapped in a trap, and only one man can free them: Hystoria, the hero himself. He must travel through a procedurally generated world, meet lots of interesting people, catch some food and get back home. Note that every "life" is randomly generated. Game mechanics will be varied and different characters will not give the same amount of items. The choice of course, counts. The developers of the game have already released some images, videos and more with interesting facts about
