Eighty-Five Magazine produces English magazines for visitors to Japan, delivering its content in English, and is known as "Japan's leading English magazine." Each issue of Eighty-Five Magazine contains articles about Japan, and places Japan in context with the rest of the world. It is a great guidebook for traveling to Japan. Eighty-Five Magazine products are published in three monthly editions: February, June, and October. Each issue has a wide range of topics to help readers and travelers find useful information about Japan. The videos give an idea of what a typical work day is like for an average Japanese salary man (office worker) and for an average family of four. The segments are interesting and informative in their own right, showing how Japanese families live and interact. There are also segments on hobbies and leisure time activities. There are some unique monthly specials, like an English map and guide, a shoe-hunting guide (despite the intro that Japan is one of the world's great shoemakers), and a guide to comfortable shoes for children. There are also a few segments that touch on life's cultural issues. The first is one that examines how stores and advertisements are used as tools to mold and build Japan's image to the rest of the world. There is also an informative show about how to be a consumer in Japan. For example, you can take a quiz to find out if you're a buying hopeful, a shopper's happy, or a producer (shopping for yourself). A few other segments look at skills or fields that you can study or train for in Japan. How to study in the classroom, how to go to work in Japan, language skill training centers, and Japanese-style greeting (shichi-go-san) are all covered. You can also check out a segment about coming to Japan. The segment looks at visas for the United States, and how to get residency there. Eighty-Five Magazine includes a guide to the many different forms of transportation available in Japan. This includes both public transportation, and the forms of private transportation that cover the entire range, from taxis to limousines to vehicles for young children. There is also a section that tells you about health care in Japan. These cover subjects like how to find a doctor, what procedures will be covered and what to do if you are sick in Japan. Pretty much everyone uses Google Drive to store their files. Sometimes you just need a simple file sharing service for a department. The new Google Cloud Storage for Work team is a new service that provides a lot of features and is easier to use than Google Drive, specifically for teams. I recently moved a bunch of my own files to the new service and it works great. I've been using it myself and my wife using it in her work with our daughter, and she's loving it! Here's what we're seeing at Tyton so far: No upload delays. There's no waiting several hours before your file is uploaded. As soon as you save, your file goes into storage. Plus, you get unlimited storage for 1TB per account. When you create a new file, it's called a "bucket" and stored in the cloud. So as the file grows, it gets stored more places. You can select where you want it to be. When you save a file in Google Drive, it goes into "Work files" where it can be accessed by all your team members. Share files by sending them to people in your workgroup. Work files can be accessed from anywhere you are. You can find files faster in Work. Google Drive has Search to search your files, and Work has Search too. You can rename a file without having to create a new one. Then anyone with the link can access that file. If you're a user at Work, you can upload videos too. You can get files from Gmail, OneDrive, or Dropbox and share them to a file in Google Drive.
