In the near future, following a string of endless government abuse and surveillance violations, world governments rise up in political, military, and private opposition to certain entities identified as "terrorists". In the middle of this war, two opposing companies are working on their version of what "the ultimate soldier" should be: the ultimate human androids. The companies called A-Tech and Mobotix, who are both working on the development of the secret androids "ALE" (A-Level Elegant Exoskeletons), build the soldiers to be at par with the best super soldiers. But ALE is a different kind of soldier with the power to change his own form, record his victories, and transfer his endurance and strength to anyone around him. The A-Tech is developing the ALE for the government, to use in illegal military actions and rouge operations such as robbing of banks and assassinations. One day, while A-Tech is secretly transporting ALE from their corporation to the Mobotix, he meets with an accident while trying to escape. That's when ALE gets infected with the A-Tech robots code and starts to fight for the freedom of his "home" A-Tech. In this game, that is a power struggle between the seemingly unstoppable super humans (ALE) vs the human androids (A-Tech ALE) that ends with A-Tech losing its very existence. "As big as the game looks and as impressive as the gameplay is, the story needs to be described as an absolute must. The story is what put this game above all other story driven FPS' in the genre." VRGames "The story is strong and strong enough to make this game great. It's told through a very original and creative way, and it looks spectacular." GiantBomb.com "It's incredible how great and how deep the storyline is." AlienatedGamer "As much as I like the gameplay, the sheer amount of story and content really blew me away." GameVideos "The story is engaging, the characters are extremely likeable, and the narrative is absolutely worth the investment." Granzell "We also like how the game didn't forget what made the game industry awesome – the devs have put a ton of thought into this game." VR c9d1549cdd

, Album Review Voting begins now in our poll for the best era of the Street Fighter franchise. If you want to see which era earns the most votes, visit r/StreetFighterVoting Super Time Force Ultra Super Time Force Ultra is a simple game. There's nothing complex about it. Well, they could have done without some of the in-game visuals, but over all, this is just a pretty good game. You might want to have an energy drink or two ready for this review, it is just about 4 and a half hours long. Story THE LADIES DANCE WITH ULTRA! I'm going to try something new for my reviews. Skipping the opening so I can get right to the point. After about 5 minutes of gameplay, you're dropped into the fight to determine the fate of humanity. This is your archetypal "hero starts the game locked in a battle for the future" story. In this case, a sea serpent is causing havoc (sheesh, isn't a giant sea-serpent kinda redundant?) to our lost Earth and causing all kinds of havoc. Admittedly, it's not very well laid out. Basically, some Earth people are having a dance party. Two brothers come to the party and sometime while the two guys are gone, the Earth is attacked by a monster. Before the damage can get out of hand, you get to play Super Time Force Ultra. You then get to choose one of two characters. Each has 5 stages to attempt to rescue Earth. They're very different characters, with different combat techniques. Not two generic fighters, but the developers really made sure to make the play style of each character unique. Each character has a different inter-branch attack. The player is the commander of the whole combat operation. As far as I can tell, you choose the talent, then both characters are used. You're are dropped into the story in some obscure place on Earth, and are told to either save them or give up. As for as the story goes, you're given $300 to save Earth. There is no saving the planet, and you're told there is no time to play this for fun. The game world is huge, and you're given a goal to complete. You're told you

Sugar Cube describes the experience of becoming the first player of an unscripted and improvisational narrative. You are in charge of a mismatched crew of sugar cubes and you have to navigate the oceans of Cioko. If you control your crew well enough, your goal is to get your crew to an island guarded by a powerful adversary. The crew usually has to fight its way to the island. On the way, you encounter other crew and sometimes someone who tries to capture you or your crew to obtain the precious sugar cube you carry with you. Sometimes your crew will be boarded by your enemies and will have to escape while fighting them or rush to the mainland. You have to make the right decisions for your crew and your survival. That's it! Both sides will have to play the board. Therefore, it is important for each crew to play correctly, they have to set the order in which they attack and what abilities they have. But don't worry, for each crew it is very easy to set their orders as you start with a crew card and can assign whatever attack to any cube. What can be achieved in a fight between every crew? 1) In most encounters, the battle will often consist of one to three rounds. Sometimes the battle will be extended. On the average, it may take up to around 10 seconds to complete one round. The encounter will last as long as there are crews and matches. 2) Each crew can have a specific goal in a battle. And you can achieve this by assigning values to your cubes. This is important to know, because you will need to balance them between their combat abilities and their goals. 3) Each crew is determined by two stats. They are the speed and the strength. You can access these stats and view their overview before the fight by asking your crew to cast their anchor near a building. 4) Each round consists of four matches. You have to choose whether you want to attack first, defence, take the headshot or let the enemy attack you. After you press one of these four buttons, your cubes will attack each other. The battle commences with the attack button on the crew that you want to attack first. This crew will now fight against the crew that you targeted. After you are done with the current fight, you can attack another crew or let them go. 5) When you have selected three crews to fight against each other, the battle will begin. On the average, each round will consist of 10 to 15 fights
