Star Trek Timelines is an exciting new Star Trek® based massively multiplayer online real-time strategy game. As captain of your very own starship, you'll embark on epic missions, battle for resources, and explore a vast galaxy full of opportunities. The Star Trek Timelines Starter Pack includes two game mode options, each available from the beginning of the game: CONQUEST – battle it out with friends and other players in this world-renowned MMO real-time strategy game. A wide variety of upgrades and new equipment will be available to make your ship even more powerful than your opponent. FLEET COMMAND – get started in Command Mode. Customize your ship to suit your playstyle, and explore the galaxy in this unique 3D map. Fight your way through endless levels of capturable territory to dominate both the fleet and the galaxy! Complete packs can be used on ANY ship in the game, and ship progression has been streamlined for the quickest advancement. Dilithium deposits can be bought, sold, or held as an alternative to just buying or selling game time. In addition to the starter pack, there will be awesome DLC added to the game, such as packs that will give you exclusive rewards, new ships to battle against, and more! STT is based on the Creative Common Share Alike license, which means that anyone who buys STT Starter Pack will be able to use the STT content in his/her own copy of the game.Q: Ubuntu 11.10 getting blank display I recently updated to Ubuntu 11.10 and it started working fine, until I tried to play a game called Pilotwings Resort (previously i've always had great performance from this game) and now it seems that the graphics are just like in the screenshot, I made it only once but after that i cannot play anything graphically, sometimes it might freeze for a second but i'm not sure if that's the graphics or if it's the game. I tried purging graphic drivers to see if that worked, didn't work (actually it did not even remove any packages related to the graphic drivers), i tried running it in a VM (two) on my other computer to see if I couldn't reproduce the same problem that I'm currently having (no, they worked fine), any ideas? I can try to make a screenshot of the game and let you know how it is. Thanks. A: Try removing/purging the graphic driver you have installed

"Tokyo School Life" is a massively multiplayer online (MMO) otome visual novel that taps into nostalgia for the golden age of Japanese school romance. In a world where girls and boys don't interact, the central protagonist is more than a little lost. With a touch of charisma and no gender, she'll find a chance to meet and befriend students, and develop a relationship with the boy of her dreams. Her efforts may be complicated by a malevolent force bent on corrupting her true self, but that's just an added challenge. This project is a bi-local effort between Tokyo and Berlin, and is the result of a collaboration between three talented teams: Yuki Tedokon, RyoRca, and RocketWreck. Roman The Worm Gameplay A 2D Game in Flash with lots of colorful and challenging enemys. In the beginning Roman is lost under the ground, he can't find his way back and his family is close to be lost. Roman needs to find his family to escape the deadly tunnels and fight against different creatures. Go out of the ground and use a powerful weapon to fight against the evil creatures on your way back to your family. Once you find your family then you can access to the exit. The way to move is by using the left and right arrow keys, jump with the spacebar and attack with the A button. Use your weapon to destroy the bosses and other enemies along the way. There are power ups which will allow you to do different things. Once you find your family then you can access to the exit. There are two difficulties: Easy and Hard In the Easy difficulty you can find the exit as fast as you can. In the Hard difficulty you will find the exit with a lot of bonuses. Explore the tunnels and find your way back to the surface. Use the items and power ups wisely along the way. If you get stuck then just jump or climb to the top and use the spacebar to restart. Climb UpSolve the Daily ChallengeThe Daily Challenge is a new feature on Roman The Worm. By using the daily challenge you can discover new objects and solve daily tasks to earn extra points and unlock bonuses. The features are hidden. You will not find them by default, you have to find them by yourself. Daily Challenges1. Find the exit: Easy or Hard 2. Jump the highest: Easy or Hard 3. Hit the strongest enemy: Easy or Hard 4. What's new in Hunter Gatherer:

For Alien Space Pirates A new company claims to sell a constellation of geoeengineering satellites that “space lawyers” say threaten national security because, well, they’re here to spy. Robotic behemoths are increasingly lining up to take on the atmosphere’s assortment of jackholes. They’re also uncovering some things quite grandly, like the fact that here on Earth, we’ve barely scratched the surface of the space strata in which life is happening. Amid all this, there’s an old, familiar cry on the outskirts of the frontier: Get me out of here. Not so for the newest crop of aspiring astronauts, or your friends lately admitted to the secret and powerful engineering cadre. (Goodbye, interstellar probes, hello: robots.) The four-person outfit called Spacelines has unveiled an all-new spaceflight propulsion system that, they claim, will drastically shrink the time astronauts need to reach Mars – from the mythical 18 months now being heralded by folks like Elon Musk to as little as a week. A launch scheduled for the fall promises to delight science fiction aficionados and gosh-wow awning pundits, particularly if the $48 million mass-production of the Spacelines “X,” as its supercharged, fuel efficient carbon-fiber rocket launcher is known, opens up the cosmos to a wider milieu of would-be explorers. But too bad for Spacelines, according to Levar Stoney, a former astronaut and director of programs at the Planetary Society, who worked on the development of the X over the last few years. Stoney has not spoken publicly on the flight program, but in reviewing the company’s materials on his personal blog, he noted the passion of the founder and proposed numerous problems with the CEO’s scheme, from its practical and financial toll on space tourism, to the ethics of plunking down a few billion dollars to reorder the cosmos. “I suppose if I looked long and hard enough, I could find something positive to take away from their grand ambitions,” Stoney wrote. “But even after all I’ve seen and heard, I can’t find any. The idea is impossible and absurd.” This is hardly the first time we have heard from the X skeptics, nor is Stoney alone in his critique. The founders have gotten a hard look from a veritable circus
