FIFA 22 also introduces a host of new players and teams, including Juventus and Atletico Madrid, as well as English Premier League champions Chelsea FC for the first time in the series. Features The new season introduces a host of improvements and improvements, including: “HyperMotion Technology” engine, which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits; PC Performance Improvements, including enhanced Direct Control controls and physics, and support for SLI & Crossfire configurations for additional performance gains, as well as support for DirectX 12, Vulkan and OpenGL 4.4 APIs; Star Ratings, an entirely new in-depth player evaluation system that allows you to manage players on all levels of your squad, including free transfers; Robust Match Day View and Tactics View, with a refreshed coaching interface, expanded Player Card and Nationality view; A complete set of player ratings and experience goals to make each club more challenging, and even more game-changing; A brand new training section, allowing all players to work together on their individual attributes and build the all-important player profiles; A revamped transfer interface; and FIFA Ultimate Team, with new player cards, player archetypes, and a very different Draft mode. The most important improvements, however, have arrived in the game's core gameplay. Put simply, the engine of FIFA 22 is faster, leaner and more accurate. To put it simply, we've reached peak football. New Engine The engine of FIFA 22 is the result of an eight-year journey to provide more accurate and more realistic football. We've removed over 250 individual physics objects from the engine and replaced them with dynamic objects that are physically correct. Any bias that causes the ball to move in a way that is exaggerated for no other reason than it's different to previous experience has been removed. A new lateral force vector has been implemented to ensure balls have the correct amount of drift when they're on the ground. The result is the most accurate ball physics in a football game ever.

The engine now takes into account every single collision of the ball with the ground, the player, and the goalkeeper. What was previously referred to as "propensity collision" is now at the heart of the physics engine and is in a league of its own

What's new in Fifa 22:

- MLS: Created MLS players in Career Mode. You can pre-order Brazil, Argentina and Mexico stars from the new Player faces in this release. This release also features custom kits for the MLS. Mexico players have more muscular physiques and Brazil and Argentina players have a sharper contrast between shirt and socks and sleeveless shirts. You can choose your appearance any way you want with the Personalise kits.
- Premier League: New player faces for England and Germany. You can customize England and Germany players in your squad. England player faces have a more muscular physique and player faces for Germany have a tighter t-shirt collar, t-shirt sleeves and trouser hem. Germany shirts feature a thin soccer collar.
- COMPETITION: 22 players are new to the Tournament mode which was introduced in FIFA 21. This includes four more goalkeepers, seven new defenders, five new midfielders, five new forwards and two new goalkeepers. You can now choose European or International tournaments for a total of 200 matches. The Euro 2016 tournament is coming to FIFA 22 as well.
- GAMEPLAY: In FIFA 22 you can personalize your player designs by customizing player faces, hairstyles, t-shirt numbers and shirt designs. Changes include the ability to undress your player and make changes to your player's personal appearance before they enter a game. In addition, the new Dynamic Player Traits are now persistent until you enter a stadium for a match. Unlike previous games, you can have different player traits on your left and right sides.
