We've put together a video (featuring player reactions) that includes the data we've captured from the guys who played the match and the "fast-paced" look of the game in action, as well as an explanation of how the match was played and the technical aspects of the game. If you're only interested in the gameplay footage, skip to the 3m 15s mark for that. There's also a preview video if you're interested in the features and content. As always, we're looking forward to hearing your feedback on the new features, gameplay and other aspects of the game. To share your thoughts, chat with other community members on our EA FIFA forums, or leave a review in the Xbox store. How did we achieve these effects? We designed the "HyperMotion" animation system from the ground up with our lead animators to make sure the animations feel intense, dynamic and exhilarating. To that end, we capture and blend extremely high levels of speed, motion, acceleration and muscle memory from real-life footballers. The system follows the basic principles and rules of football and leverages the on-the-field actions of the players. The technology also features a new variety of animations as well as new audio cues. We're also adding several new features to the ball, such as WindWaves and Puffs, as well as a new "quick touch" animation on both kicks and headers. We've also added some new dribbling animations. The game's cast of real-life footballers, who are all wearing motion capture suits, all provided their on-field commentary during the game as well as shared their thoughts on how the new animations feel, and how they play. How do the different parts of the game benefit from the new "HyperMotion" animation system? There are multiple effects that go into making the movement of players - from running, jumping, passing, shooting, shooting on the run, dribbling and catching - realistic and exciting. For instance, when a player makes a "hard" tackle, it gets repositioned immediately to have the best effect on the opponent. Or when a goal is scored, the players get happy and excited animations to celebrate the goal. We're even adding optional whistles and whistles to change the score based on performance. In

Created a UEL Champions League challenge and created a 2/3 match against AI that whooped my ass, think it can be done in career mode too? Ryuji "You did some good things, you clearly have the potential to become a good player." "but you can't be a player in front of goals because you always go down." "In other words, you'll need to work on your technique." "It's all up to you..." (the rest are all cut-scene BS that happened at the end of every level) I have both career mode and pro mode on FC. On career mode, the commentator will always say something like: "You seemed very nervous during the training session. Have you got what it takes to face off against the players at the top of the game?" The goal of this is to pressure the player so he loses his confidence. I've been playing to win, however, I can't take that approach from the beginning of the career mode. I have to train my character, get on a good diet so I can face off against the players at the top. So basically, if I lose my first match, then I'm stuck with them forever? SonsOfWolfen
