Put simply, it improves accuracy and reactions, responsiveness and presentation. More closely, we've got a more detailed look at HyperMotion Technology in FIFA 22 below: FIFA 22 — More than just a Physics-based Engine The long-requested Physics-based Engine. The FIFA franchise has always utilized its programming expertise to produce what is effectively a physics engine for the football match. With FIFA 20, we've also taken a step further in this regard, and the FIFA 22 game engine is a true physics engine. While there are a number of different ways to “engine” a football game, in FIFA 22 we are referring to the programming and design of the engine, as well as the Physics. FIFA 21 welcomed the introduction of our “pure physics engine” and this one is bigger and better! Having taken a closer look at the FIFA 22 engine at E3 2019, it is clear that this physics engine has received some high-level attention: The top-level ‘gameplay’ part of the FIFA game engine is based on the Physics Engine, and we use the majority of its functionality. This includes the physics in the ball, collisions with players, the collision of players with each other, and many more features. This is important to mention, because this is what has been developed as a result of years of football gameplay research, optimization, and tuning. The amount of data collected from real-life football matches is staggering, so we use all of this data to give the Physics a helping hand in gameplay. For instance, we use the motions collected from multiple players and their unique movements during official matches, to create the ‘healthy’ and accurate movements that players will use in the game. Our goal is to replicate the actions of the players as accurately as possible, so that the player is feeling as natural as possible in its movements. A physics engine is extremely important to accurately render the physics and motions of the players and ball in the game. What's more, it is crucial for us to use and understand the behavior of the game and accurately calculate the ideal timing, distance, and direction for it to happen. We take these actions and measurements from matches, make them more precise and easier to use, and then create the perfect game physics for FIFA 22. The technical view of the FIFA 22 physics engine. In FIFA 22, we have retained the

FIFA is the best-selling sports game in the world, with more than 90m players around the world. Every year, over a billion people play FIFA, and over the past 12 years it has received 25 awards including 16 Game of the Year awards. This year we built on the foundations of FIFA 19 with incredible innovation across the game, every mode and all 61 teams in the Ultimate Team. For the first time, AI control team-mates, and with all-new personalities, this year we've tried to bring the emotion of football alive in an authentic and accurate way. An authentic football experience in the palm of your hand FIFA is the game of the moment. We have committed to changing the sport to make it even more enjoyable, providing the best football experience on every device. That's why this year we've launched a new FIFA that blends the best qualities of the console and mobile versions to create the best football in the palm of your hand. For the first time, we have the ability to play FIFA on a tablet in a way that feels natural. We have a new Tap-the-Ball feature that allows you to draw passes and dribble moves in an intuitive way. We also have a Pro Mode that enables you to go on unparalleled journeys through the lifecycle of a footballer. On your phone and tablet, you'll experience the game from a new perspective. The Pro Controller and PlayStation Camera bring incredible precision and flexibility to play with your teammates. And on Nintendo Switch™, the crisp, clean GamePad experience will really help bring your favourite team and mode to life. Even more beautiful football For the first time, we're including all of the players, kits, boots, pitches and stadiums of all 61 clubs. The pitch has been upgraded with Field Goal graphics – the best ever seen in a football game – making every tackle a celebration and every penalty kick an action shot. We've also added new animations, including a new blade swing when diving, new animated celebration shots and high-quality clothing. Of course, the Goalmouth animation remains a hallmark of the FIFA series and this year we've given Goalkeeper animations their own unique stance and reaction. The load-in animation of players and kits has also been re-rendered to have more subtle and accurate physics, while kits have been made to fit each player perfectly. New Season bc9d6d6daa
