Similarity analysis of clinical and experimental studies of the effects of ethanol on the autonomic nervous system and on the release of hormones. The present research was aimed at comparing some of the results of some clinical and experimental studies on the pharmacological action of ethanol on the autonomic nervous system and on the release of hormones. Clinical investigations were carried out in patients with central diabetes insipidus (DI), thyrotoxicosis, primary ciliary dyskinesia, urinary tract disorders, respiratory disorders, autism, mania, and panic disorder. The experimental studies included in vitro, in vivo, and in situ experiments. Data from the in vitro studies were more or less similar to those obtained in the clinical studies, except for the results of investigations in patients with urinary tract disorders. The results obtained in the in vivo studies were similar to those from the in vitro studies on isolated tissues and in the in situ studies on animals. The in vitro and in vivo experiments on isolated tissues were more appropriate for the study of the pharmacological effects of ethanol at a neurohormonal level. The results of the in vitro and in vivo studies on isolated tissues were not applicable to human subjects, as the results obtained in the in vitro and in vivo studies in isolated tissues must be compared with the results of the in vitro and in vivo studies in the intact individual. The in vivo and in situ experiments on animals were less applicable to the study of the pharmacological effect of ethanol on the autonomic nervous system and on the release of hormones. A message from Amazon's co-founder Jeff Bezos asking billionaires to help fund a spacefaring civilization that would make it possible for humans to live on the moon and Mars has gone viral. "Over the past year, I've been talking to people about the future of human spaceflight," Bezos wrote in an op-ed published in the Wall Street Journal. "They're surprisingly unified in their view that the space industry needs to be reinvented, and sooner than we think." Bezos, he said, sought out the opinions of six billionaires to get their opinions. The result? "I thought this was fantastic." That wasn't enough for Bezos, who took his message of billionaire space flight to Congress. "As it turns out, Congress is a lot like a billionaire investing in R&D, too.

The aim of this study was to examine relationships between heart rate (HR), ventilation and dyspnea during exercise. Respiratory gas data were obtained from 51 patients with coronary artery disease before and during symptom-limited treadmill exercise. First derivatives of heart rate, ventilation and dyspnea were calculated (dHR, dVt, dDyspnea, respectively). The relationships between these and corresponding slopes were determined. There was a significant, positive correlation between HR and dVt ($r = 0.637$, $p = 0.000$), and a negative correlation between HR and dDyspnea ($r = -0.625$, $p = 0.000$). There was a significant negative correlation between HR and dVt during both the first ($r = -0.631$, $p = 0.000$) and second ($r = -0.521$, $p = 0.001$) minute, as well as the total exercise ($r = -0.486$, $p = 0.002$), but not at rest. There was a significant negative correlation between HR and dDyspnea during the first ($r = -0.489$, $p = 0.002$) and second ($r = -0.410$, $p = 0.018$) minute of exercise, as well as the total exercise ($r = -0.474$, $p = 0.001$), but not at rest. There was no significant correlation between HR and dyspnea during recovery. During exercise in 6d1f23a050
