Do you know how much of your 6 figures of annual income is spent on the car? The reality is that most of them are spent on the care of a aging relative and not the car. Trust me the car wont last long if that is the only thing they are looking out for. My dad is a nurse and loves his job. He has an additional car for his job, and he too cannot rely on public transport. If he cannot get a lift, he sits in his car and waits, and his visits are time consuming so he cannot count on it. The other thing that is important is that he can work all year round, in line with his job, and not have to do it in the summer when it's busy. In Holland the situation is still different. Your scenario is not what most Dutch have to deal with. Most Dutch have the choice of different types of public transportation
