I am trying to write a query that will return me a document where the _id exists in a linked array in another document and it's the last inserted document. Here is an example document: { "_id": "XXX", "name": "xxx" "date": "2020-01-01", "objects": [{ "_id": "XXX", "score": 10 }] } and here is an example of the linked document: { "_id": "XXX", "doc_id": "XXX", "name": "xxx" } I want to select the above document and check to see if the _id of the linked array is the _id of the newly inserted document. If it is the last one it is inserted. If it is any of the other documents in the linked array then it is not the last one so it is not what I am after. A: You can use $last aggregation operator to get the last inserted document to the collection. This is the output if you use _id field for sorting, which are generally unique in mongodb. db.collection.aggregate([{ "$last": "$objects" }, { "$match": { 6d1f23a050
