This research is the result of original analysis of city-level data, surveys and interviews with business leaders from around the world using the WTCA network . It is also the result of work to deepen the integration of health data and the development of tools that make it easier to obtain information about the health of employees. “The results of the study suggest that in today's organizations there is a gap between how companies take care of the health of employees and how they do it. It's not just a gap between companies that do it better - there are
