Now when you run helm upgrade or helm install, without using --skip-horizontal-download, the correct yaml files are generated by helm templates and the correct deployment is performed. With this change, there is no need to edit the .tpl files and to follow the config.yaml configuration. This change is a backward incompatible change and is explained in detail in the Kubernetes docs on this page and in this page . For existing customers, please read the scale-replicas-of-a-replica-set-in-all-namespaces documentation. This release delivers a new (to Nelnet) online account setup process that is easy to complete, and lets you download a document that is easily viewable on most web browsers. It also delivers a new “mini-sign up” feature that lets you quickly and easily allow log-in to your student account from any web-enabled device. The Apollo gatekeeper for the proxy now groups access to some resources to prevent a single resource from being downloaded to more than one client. This allows each client to access their own data for use with mobile clients. See Using Apollo Gatekeeper to Limiting the Resources that are available on a Web Page and Organizing Project Files and Resources in an Apollo Gatekeeper Project for more information. To make it easier for consumers to view available assets in Artifactory, in the Public Repositories configuration page, artifacts can be previewed without the need to download them. When an artifact’s URL points to a storage service that is not NFS, an Artifact Portal is used to display the content.

The next three are all related to keys being generated by the current versions of Peer-to-Peer (P2P) software downloaded by the clients. If these keys are generated incorrectly, then the node is unable to authenticate with the peers. This may lead to the client being locked out. If for any reason the connection to the local.onion directory fails, for example a hostname or IP address change, the node will no longer be able to download all the P2P files from a torrent and will have to start over. This process is called "reloading". To reload the P2P clients, you need to go into Settings -> Peer to Peer and follow these steps: The next three are related to the usage of bandwidth limiting functions within the P2P client software. This is done in order to prevent excessive consumption of bandwidth by users. However, if a peer is blocked due to exceeding its bandwidth limit, the peer will no longer be able to download additional P2P files. This is the more common reason for false positives.
