the smurfette's group eventually encounter the gargamel's group, only to find that they are being led by gargamel's assistant, who happens to be none other than merlin (also played by jonathan pryce) who recognizes the egg and decides to help the group. soon enough, the two groups find themselves working together to beat back gargamel's army and save the lost village. eventually, gargamel finds out that smurfette is missing and captures the egg, only to learn that it is incapable of being cracked, so he leaves and returns to the forbidden forest to get back the other smurf eggs, which are all located there. just as gargamel is about to capture the lost village, he encounters the egg and learns that the egg is the one from which the smurfs were created. he then attempts to use the egg to restore his ancient armor and magically appears to his former glory, but is stopped short of actually regaining his former glory when papa smurf appears to challenge him to a fight. the two battle it out, eventually resulting in papa smurf's ultimate demise, leaving gargamel with an egg that, in his mind, will eventually restore his pride and allow him to regain his magical powers. meanwhile, the smurfette's group escapes the forbidden forest and return to the lost village, but, to their surprise, they are no longer the lost village. having learned that the lost village is really the forbidden forest, the group learns that they were tricked and refuses to go back home, preferring to stay in the lost village. later, gargamel's army makes their way to the lost village and attempts to capture the smurfs. however, they are saved when gargamel's assistant comes to their aid, and they are able to defeat him and free the smurfs.
