Photoshop is now available as a native app on iPad. The update brings powerful features such as Live Sharpen, Affinity Photo-esque image adjustments that can be applied in real-time, and high-quality image file formats for mobile devices. Photoshop for iPad also supports features such as custom gestures to marquee a selection between different tool types, and with the new Content-Aware Removal feature, customers can trim an image to the background in just a few steps. One reason Adobe is excited about the update to Photoshop and the entire Creative Cloud portfolio is because it's developed on side of Apple, the company behind the world-leading smartphone, iPad and Mac platforms. "The cross-platform support and hardware rendering capability represented by apps like Photoshop and Lightroom have made these tools key in creating a seamless end-to-end workflow for professionals in the IOS offering,” said Philip Roth, Senior Director, Environmental Advertising and Communications, at Apple. “By bringing together all of the products of the creative cloud into a single app that smoothly integrates into IOS and the rest of the Apple platform, we are enabling a more powerful and more immersive creative workflow,” said Lisa Ehrlich, Senior Director, Consumer Products, for Adobe. I have a passion for art and combining two of my favorite elements, my portrait photography and Photoshop. One of the best tools I use is the new Content Aware Fill feature for cropping photographs with out getting a misshapen clone of the subject. This feature allows the user to hover the mouse over a section of an image, crop it, and smoothly blend into the surrounding area. I was able to achieve great results with these photos in just a few clicks. It is so easy to get a myriad of results for the amazing filter or blurring effect.
